Further Indian Depredations.

We received, too late for our last week's paper, the particulars of further robberies of stock by Indians. On Saturday, the 3d inst., at noon, a band of Apaches entered the town of Tubac, and succeeded in stealing five valuable horses and a mule, owned by the Gandara brothers. They were valued at over seven hundred dollars. A few days previous, another band of Indians stole three valuable horses from Don Pedro Herrera, living near the same town. The Indians were followed by a party of dragoons from Fort Buchanan, but they succeeded in crossing the line into Sonora. About ten days since a station of the Overland Mail Company, near Camp Johnson, above the Pecos river, was visited by some 100 Camanche Indians, who stole all the stock and destroyed the property at the station.

[CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ARIZONIAN.]

Troubles on the Gila—Election News—Peace with the Mojaves—One hundred and fifty killed, etc., etc.

ARIZONA CITY, Sept. 4th, 1859.

I suppose the ARIZONIAN has received news of the robbery of the mail station, near White's ranch, and the attempted murder of the station keeper. He was left for dead, and remained insensible for more than twelve hours. Dr. Horndon, U. S. A., went up to his assistance, and he is slowly recovering. The thieving Mexicans carried off six of the finest horses owned by the O. M. Co., killed four on the road, escaped with two. This outrage caused much feeling among the Americans, and a few of them determined to clear the Gila river of Mexicans. They paid those in their employ, supplied them with provisions, and ordered them to leave. The Mexicans, it is said, went to Slater's haying camp and endeavored to steal his mules, but were pursued by the Americans. One account says that six Mexicans were killed—another, only one. The Mexicans at the mines, in the Gila junction, are much alarmed, and a collision is feared. When will Congress put an end to these scenes of violence by giving Arizona the protection of the law?

An express arrived here to day, bringing news that the Mojaves had sued for peace. They acknowledge to 150 killed. Major Armstrong, with his small command, has gained much credit for his summary punishment of ourred brethren.

The election passed off here very quietly. The vote at the three precincts falls, I believe, a little short of 200. There are more men here than that, but at the Arizona City polls, none but Americans were allowed to vote. You are aware that California claims a small strip on this side of the Colorado, and on this account a number, who are really Arizonians, and who will live in the Territory, did not vote, as they had paid taxes in California this year. The total population within a circuit of a few miles is several hundred. The vote here was unanimous for Mr. Mowry.

The Mexicans are taking out considerable gold on the Gila junction, and I understand some Americans are making good wages.

The new steamer made a safe and quick passage to Fort Mojave, Beale's crossing—demonstrating anew the navigability of the Colorado, 200 miles above this point.

The ARIZONIAN is winning golden opinions under its new management, and will be well supported in this part of the Territory.

Wife Murder in Tubac.

We learn that on Saturday, the 10th inst., at about 8 o'clock, P. M., in Tubac, a Mexican by the name of Francisco Carlsos, better known as "Chico," shot his wife. It is supposed he killed her in a fit of jealousy. She is said to have been quite handsome. The murderer escaped to Sonora, the resort of all murderers and thieves from this country.
